

I invite you to join me in a room of collected sadness, placed in small boxes and handled with care.

Where grieving becomes individual, it appears in a delicate range of chubby shapes.

When a body is forever calm but the spirits are joined by the hands and dance in circles to the sound of a high-pitched voice.

When a funeral becomes an occurrence of repetition,
a happening of thought,
an organized ceremony.

: where bad breath has no meaning
: when emotions are mixed to juice and solitude is made team captain.

: where the constructed sorrow awaits.

I invite you to join
and be joined by the cold thought of death.
Protected by the sincere feeling of something soft and the calming scent of Lavender.
