Clay sculptures as homages to the Armenian "Vishapakar" monoliths, which are one of mankind's oldest religious monuments, take the visitors to the beginning of our history. They are contrasted with colorful illustrations of our complex emotional inner life in contemporary everyday situations that humorously illuminate them. A video installation captures the power of hope that can help us overcome crises, while a sound performance questions our way of communicating in public places.

The Armenian and Germany based artists explore our multifaceted nature very differently, as the human being is also the starting point and connecting element of the German-Armenian exchange project "m a r d s" (Armenian for human being) by G.Urban Platform in Munich.
